SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

I. Background

One of the key functions of the United States patent examination system is to determine whether a claimed invention is novel and nonobvious. According to United States patent law, a claimed invention is not patentable if prior art teaches or renders obvious the invention. See 35 U.S.C. §§102 & 103 (1996). Although the term "prior art" generally describes all information that can be used to show that an invention is not patentable, Section 102 of title 35 of the United States Code provides a full legal definition of what information qualifies as prior art. 35 U.S.C. §102(a)-(g).

Locating relevant prior art is one of the most important aspects of the patent examining process. During the prosecution of a patent application, such prior art will be evaluated by the examiner to determine patentability. Moreover, once the patent is issued, the prior art of record will be closely scrutinized by competitors and potential licensees to determine the validity and scope of the patent. In the event of litigation, these prior art documents will be considered by the courts for determinations of the validity and scope of issued patents.

Patent examiners and applicants share the responsibility of ensuring that pertinent prior art is being considered during the examination of a patent application. To this end, the USPTO imposes an obligation on patent examiners to conduct a thorough search of the prior art and on applicants to submit information known to them to be material to patentability. To assist patent examiners in discharging their duty to conduct a thorough search of the prior art, the USPTO provides patent examiners with access to a vast collection of patent documents and nonpatent literature. However, searching prior art in emerging technologies presents challenges. First, the terminology in such fields may not be standardized, which makes it difficult to conduct automated searches based on key terms. Second, prior art information in new technologies is frequently not categorized or indexed in a fashion that facilitates searching and accessibility. Lastly, prior art in certain areas, such as software-related inventions, may not be available through customary or predictable means.

Recently, USPTO has been criticized for not considering the most pertinent prior art during the examination of patent applications. In particular, software-related patents have been criticized for containing too few references to nonpatent literature related to these inventions. While many applicants submit a large number of prior art documents in connection with a filed patent application, the USPTO may not be receiving the kind of valuable nonpatent literature necessary to optimize the quality of patent examination. As the agency charged with issuing valid patents, the USPTO recognizes the importance of obtaining and analyzing the closest prior art to the proper prosecution of a patent application and the validity of an issued patent. For this reason, the USPTO is interested in obtaining public opinion as to whether patent examiners are identifying and applying the most pertinent prior art during the examination of a patent application, and if not, how the USPTO may be equipped to do so.

II. Issues for Public Comment

Interested members of the public are invited to testify and present written comments on issues they believe to be relevant to the discussion below. Questions following the discussion are included to identify specific issues upon which the USPTO is interested in obtaining public opinion.

A. Current Procedures for Obtaining Prior Art

Recognizing the importance of issuing patents that are properly searched and examined, USPTO rules and procedures impose specific requirements on both examiners and applicants for identifying material prior art. These obligations are designed to furnish patent examiners with sufficient information to make appropriate novelty and nonobviousness determinations.

Patent examiners are obligated to conduct "a thorough investigation of the available prior art relating to the subject matter of the claimed invention." 37 C.F.R. §1.104(a) (1998). More specifically, the Manual of Patent Examining Procedure (MPEP) instructs patent examiners that prior art searches include not only the field in which the invention is classified, but also analogous arts. See MPEP §904.01(c) (July 1998).

Moreover, patent examiners are instructed to develop a search strategy that includes United States patents and "other organized systems of literature," and to implement the search strategy manually and by machine. MPEP §904.01(d).

To assist examiners in obtaining prior art, the USPTO has invested a substantial amount of financial resources to the search and retrieval of a wide variety of prior art documents. Patent examiners can readily search classified paper files, microfilm, and CD-ROMs, comprising United States patents, foreign patent documents, Patent Cooperation Treaty (PCT) publications, as well as a large selection of nonpatent literature, including technical journals, books, magazines, encyclopedias, product catalogues, and industry newsletters. In addition, patent examiners have access to hundreds of in-house and commercial online databases providing convenient access, from their desktop, to millions of United States and foreign patent and nonpatent literature documents.

Emerging technologies, such as telecommunications and the computer-related arts, present challenges in searching and identifying the most relevant prior art. This is often because the best prior art with respect to these new technologies is available as nonpatent literature months to years before it is available in the form of United States or foreign patents. Accordingly, searching the nonpatent literature in blossoming technologies is vital to patentability determinations. To ensure complete coverage, the USPTO is assembling a larger, more complete nonpatent literature prior art collection in emerging technologies and is working on providing patent examiners with better access to nonpatent literature in new areas of technology.

Concurrent with the examiner's duty to conduct a thorough and complete search of the prior art, applicants have a duty to submit all information known to them to be material to patentability. Specifically, 37 C.F.R. §1.56 provides that information is material to patentability when (1) it establishes, by itself or in combination with other information, a prima facie case of unpatentability of a claim; or (2) it refutes, or is inconsistent with, a position the applicant takes in (i) opposing an argument of unpatentability relied on by the USPTO, or (ii) asserting an argument of patentability. 37 C.F.R. §1.56 (1998). In addition, this Rule encourages applicants to examine certain types of information, e.g., prior art cited in search reports of a foreign patent office in a counterpart application, to ensure that material information is disclosed to the USPTO. 37 C.F.R. §1.56 (a)(1) & (2).

Applicant's duty to submit material information is important to high quality patent examination because inventors are generally in the best position to be aware of the state of the art and are in possession of, or have access to, the most pertinent prior art. For this reason, the quality of patent examination benefits when applicants assist the examiners in identifying information, particularly nonpatent literature, material to patentability.

B. Questions

The USPTO is interested in ensuring that patent examiners consider the most pertinent prior art during the examination of patent applications. Public comments, including responses to the following questions, are invited to assist the USPTO in identifying any improvements that can be made to ensure that patent examiners are searching and have access to the most relevant prior art in the course of examination of a patent application. The tenor of the following questions should not be taken as an indication that the USPTO has taken a position on or is predisposed to any particular approach to concerns regarding examiner access to pertinent prior art. Your thoughts on the following topics would be appreciated.

1. Is the most pertinent prior art being considered by patent examiners during examination of patent applications? If not, please include the following in your response:

(a) Provide support for your conclusions and identify the following:

(i) the area(s) of technology most affected; and

(ii) the type(s) of prior art most overlooked by the USPTO, including but not limited to United States patents, foreign patent documents, and nonpatent literature.

(b) Identify why you perceive that patent examiners are not considering the most pertinent prior art.

2. Do applicants submit the most pertinent prior art that they are aware of in connection with a filed patent application? If not, please include the following in your response:

(a) Provide support for your conclusions and identify the following:

(i) the area(s) of technology most affected; and

(ii) the type(s) of prior art that is not being submitted by applicants, including but not limited to United States patents, foreign patents, and nonpatent literature.

(b) Identify why you perceive that applicants are not submitting the most pertinent prior art.

3. Are the current rules and procedures for obtaining prior art during the examination of a patent application adequate and effective? If not, please include the following in your response:

(a) Identify aspects of the rules and procedures that do not facilitate the identification of pertinent prior art;

(b) Discuss any proposed changes to the rules or procedures to improve the identification of pertinent prior art; and

(c) Discuss potential advantages and hardships that patent applicants and examiners would face if particular changes were adopted.

4. Are prior art searches typically conducted before filing a patent application with the USPTO? If not, please explain. If so, please include the following in your response:

(a) An identification of the area(s) of technology where it is most likely that a prior art search would be conducted;

(b) The scope of a proper prior art search (i.e., United States Patents, foreign patents, journal articles, corporate bulletins, as well as other types of nonpatent literature); and

(c) An identification of databases and Internet resources generally searched or available to applicants and/or the USPTO.

5. Please indicate whether Information Disclosure Statements are frequently submitted and, if so, which of the following types of prior art documents are included:

(a) United States patents;

(b) Foreign patent documents and Patent Cooperation Treaty (PCT) publications; and

(c) Nonpatent literature, including but not limited to journal articles, conference papers, corporate bulletins, and Internet publications. If applicable, please explain why any of the aforementioned type(s) of prior art documents are not normally submitted to the USPTO.

6. Should applicants be required to conduct a prior art search and submit corresponding search results, including where they searched, to the USPTO when filing a patent application? If not, should applicants be required to disclose whether or not a search was conducted? Please explain your rationale and discuss any potential advantages and drawbacks.

7. Should applicants be required to submit all prior art relied upon during the drafting of the claims of a patent application? Please explain your rationale and discuss any potential advantages and drawbacks.

8. Should applicants be required to submit all nonpatent literature directed to the same field of invention attributable to, authored by, or co-authored by the applicant? Please explain your rationale and discuss any potential advantages and drawbacks.

9. Please identify any type(s) of nonpatent literature documents applicants should be required to submit to the USPTO in connection with any given patent application (e.g., conference reports, corporate collections, documents relied on in drafting an application, etc.). Please explain your rationale and discuss any potential advantages and drawbacks.

10. If you believe that the most relevant prior art is not being identified during patent examination, please identify any suggestions to obviate this problem. In your response, please:

(a) Discuss in detail any idea for addressing this problem effectively;

(b) Explain how the proposal(s) should be implemented;

(c) Identify who should bear the cost; and

(d) Indicate any potential advantages and drawbacks for each suggestion

11. Please discuss any related matters not specifically identified in the above questions. If this is done, parties are requested to:

(a) Label that portion of the response as "Other Issues";

(b) Clearly identify the matter being addressed;

(c) Provide examples, where appropriate, that illustrate the matter addressed;

(d) Identify any relevant legal authorities applicable to the matter being addressed; and

(e) Provide suggestions regarding how the matter should be addressed by the USPTO.

III. Guidelines for Oral Testimony

Individuals wishing to testify must adhere to the following guidelines:

1. Anyone wishing to testify at the hearing(s) must request an opportunity to do so no later than June 21, 1999 for the June 28, 1999 hearing, or July 7, 1999 for the July 14, 1999 hearing. Requests to testify may be accepted on the date of the hearing if sufficient time is available on the schedule. No one will be permitted to testify without prior approval.

Reference Collections of U.S. Patents and Trademarks
Available for Public Use in Patent and Trademark Depository Libraries

The following libraries, designated as Patent and Trademark Depository Libraries (PTDLs), receive patent and trademark information from the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office. Many PTDLs have on file patents issued since 1790, trademarks published since 1872, and select collections of foreign patents. All PTDLs receive both the patent and trademark sections of the Official Gazette of the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office and numerical sets of patents in a variety of formats. Patent and trademark search systems in the Cassis CD-ROM series are available at all PTDLs to increase access to that information. It is through the CD-ROM systems and other depository materials that preliminary patent and trademark searches may be conducted through the numerically arranged collections.

Each PTDL offers reference publications which outline and provide access to the patent and trademark classification systems, as well as other documents and publications which supplement the basic search tools. PTDLs provide technical staff assistance in using all materials.

All information is available for use by the public free of charge. However, there may be charges associated with the use of on-line systems, photocopying and related services.

Since there are variations in the scope of patent and trademark collections among the PTDLs, and their hours of service to the public vary, anyone contemplating use of these collections at a particular library is urged to contact that library in advance about its collections, services, and hours in order to avert possible inconvenience.

Partnership PTDLs provide enhanced and expanded services for which fees are charged. They offer on-line patent text and image searching, on-line trademark searching, and videoconferencing for examiner interviews and workshops. They accept disclosure documents on site, order file wrappers, assignment documents and certified copies for their customers, and host a variety of seminars aimed at specific audiences, including practitioners, paralegals, and independent inventors. Currently, partnerships are located at the Great Lakes Patent and Trademark Center (GLPTC) at the Detroit Public Library in Detroit, Michigan and the Sunnyvale Center for Innovation, Invention and Ideas (SCI[3]) in Sunnyvale, California.

SECTION 1.—INTERNATIONAL CLASSIFICATION

The short titles associated below with the international class numbers are terms designed merely for quick identification and are not an official part of the international classification. The full names of international classes are given in section 6.1 of the trademark rules of practice.

The designation "U.S. Cl." appearing in this section refers to the U.S. class in effect prior to Sep. 1, 1973 rather than the international class which applies to applications filed on or after that date. For adoption of international classification see notice in the OFFICIAL GAZETTE of Jun. 26, 1973 (911 O.G. TM 210).
